With that in mind, we've done some early concept work. This is the first article from our new 'Propaganda Section'. It contains a couple of 3d concepts for the different game modes and it was all made with in-house 3d tools to show our artistic skills at the moment. The thing with these sorts of 'Riot Mobile content' is that you basically take stuff from the 'PC' version of the game and re-purpose it for the mobile version. This is why, when we created this concept, we felt we could only really be proud of what we'd done. Its just a few game-related items from the PC version that have been re-painted and animated for the mobile version of the game. Everything else is just a bit different. In the game itself, most of the characters will appear differently, especially the characters. However, these are just the first concepts we made before we got more familiar with the Unity engine. Anyway, back to the topic. We've gone from the 'Riot Mobile' 2.0 content with a splash of the old 2.0 content in this concept. The PC version of the game will have its story mode and we'll also have the 'Survival' mode, which is in-game co-op. This is a mode where you play through the story together with a friend, and its actually the more intriguing mode because you have to take the enemies in together. The thing about this concept is that we're probably gonna re-skin and create more stuff for it, but it's already looking like a good concept for that mode. A quick disclaimer: If you're planning on buying the game via the App Store (or other stores) there's still no official date of the release. Until then, the content of this article is a work in progress. In case you want to keep up with how the concept is developing, please follow our Facebook page Oct 11, 2562 BE n Speaking of the PC version, the main character is finally finalized and the graphics are looking so good, that we're planning on releasing a preview or some gameplay (cough) once we're closer to launch. We're also getting ready to add a level editor, as we're looking to do a lot of content patches once the game is released. 82157476af
